Bookstein Projects is pleased to announce an exhibition of paintings by Diana Horowitz. This is the artist's third solo show with Bookstein Projects.

This exhibition will feature approximately thirty small paintings executed by the artist over the last four years. The paintings are all created on-site, often translating vast spaces to sizes spanning a few inches in each direction (6 x 6 inches, 5 x 7 inches). The locations range from the 100th floor of a Manhattan skyscraper, to the saltmarshes of Cape Cod, to the high plains of Wyoming, to the hilltop towns in Italy. But whatever her subject, the artist is able to distill a quiet, often ethereal, moment in time. The dynamic effects she captures – fireworks reflections gleaming off the waters of Lago Bracciano, the sun filtering through the morning fog, or the ebbing tides of the Atlantic – are subtle, resulting in paintings both nuanced and carefully balanced. Indeed, Horowitz's soft geometry, keen sense of color and innate sense of light work together harmoniously in these small and impactful works.

Diana Horowitz (b. 1958, New York) did graduate studies at the Tyler School of Art Program in Rome and received her MFA from Brooklyn College. She has received numerous grants and awards, including those from the National Academy of Design, the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the Lower Manhattan Cultural Council, the Pollock-Krasner Foundation, and the Ingram Merrill Foundation. In 2005 she was elected a member of the National Academy of Design, New York. Horowitz has exhibited widely in the United States and her work is included in numerous private and public collections including the Brooklyn Museum, Museum of the City of New York, New York Historical Society, Staten Island Museum, The Sheldon Swope Museum and The Mississippi Museum of Art among others. The artist lives and works in New York.
